

Steven D. Reece

From: Steven D. Reece <reeces@andrews.edu>
Sent: Tuesday, December 11, 2012 08:29
To: 'Duane Covrig'
Subject: RE: Ethics-triad

Thank you for your comments, as I greatly appreciate them. When I wrote this document, I knew that I would need to incorporate the teaching suggestions that you indicate. I am not formally trained in curriculum development, so this is an area of growth for me. I wanted to produce a basic document that I would have content and add resources as needed. I was able to come up with some activities for the first two sessions, but I have not envisioned how, I could do this further.

From: Duane Covrig [mailto:covrig@andrews.edu]
Sent: Monday, December 10, 2012 6:43 PM
To: reeces@andrews.edu
Subject: Ethics-triad

Steven:

Excellent document. For this course, you do not have to rewrite. If you plan to use in a school or Sunday School sections with kids and help other teachers do this you will need more explanations of activities and the materials needed for the activities and make this into more a lesson planning and curriculum presentation with list of video clips or activities or puzzles etc....

As it is now, it is more conceptual for teachers not practice focused.

However, don't rewrite this for now. Focus on the burial document.

Sincerely,

Duane Covrig, PhD

Look Upon Jesus, sinless is He.
Father, Input His life unto me.
My life of sorrow, my sin and woe,
Covered with His life, whiter than snow.
-F. E. Belden