Steven,

How's this?

I have taught both children and adults about the Holocaust for more than two decades. I found Steven to be one of the most organized teachers I have ever met. He thought out the lesson plans beforehand and I found that when we tweaked each next class, he was very adaptable, based on classroom responses and questions.

However, I was even more impressed with his follow-up with the students. He provided them with valuable resources, answered their questions in emails and was very available to them. Although we were "co-leaders," Steven really took the lead and made it very easy for me. Steven knew exactly what it was that he wanted and needed to teach, which made it clear to the students as well.

Let me know if this is what you needed.

Jan

Dear Jan,

I am in the final leg of my dissertation and moving toward final defense in early April. I am also working on organizing a leadership portfolio comprised of how I applied coursework to my work. An example of such an application is the Holocaust seminar that we co-taught at the Temple two years or so ago.

I need about two paragraphs of feedback from you regarding how I organized, led/co-led, and performed in teaching the Holocaust seminar. Could you give me your feedback?

If you could provide your feedback to me by Monday, February 18, I would greatly appreciate it!

Thank you,

Steven
